

Dr. Sangeet Bhakur

→ 1. Introduction - The first part of the paper is an introduction to the topic. It should be clear, concise, and to the point. It should state the purpose of the paper and the main findings.

→ 2. Literature Review - The second part of the paper is a literature review. This is a critical analysis of the existing research on the topic. It should identify the strengths and weaknesses of the existing research and highlight the gaps in the literature.

→ 3. Methodology - The third part of the paper is the methodology. This is where you describe the research methods you used to collect and analyze data. It should be clear, detailed, and replicable.

→ 4. Results and Discussion - The fourth part of the paper is the results and discussion. This is where you present your findings and discuss their implications. It should be clear, concise, and to the point. It should state the purpose of the paper and the main findings.

→ 5. Conclusion - The fifth part of the paper is the conclusion. This is where you summarize your findings and state your conclusions. It should be clear, concise, and to the point. It should state the purpose of the paper and the main findings.

→ 6. References - The sixth part of the paper is the references. This is where you list the sources you used in your research. It should be clear, concise, and to the point. It should state the purpose of the paper and the main findings.

Date: 13/10/25

MTC

SEM-IV

Signature